William Hair Haseler is an English silversmith based in Birmingham and heavily associated with Liberty & Co. Founded in 1870 producing gold, silver, and jewellery, it became a limited company in 1901 as 'W H Haseler Ltd.' with W H Haseler and his sons William Rabone and Frank as the first directors. They went into partnership with Liberty's in 1898, producing most of Liberty's silverware from their Birmingham workshop, designed by Archibald Knox. Liberty's range of jewellery and silver sold under the trade name of 'Cymric', a subsidiary company known as Liberty & Co. (Cymric) Ltd. was registered in May 1901. They also made the 'Tudric' pewter range for Liberty's.
