Description

Set Of Mounted Red Deer Antlers.

A large pair of 10 point red deer antlers with skull cap, mounted onto an oak board. These stag antlers are an excellent wall display. As the Taxidermist is unknown it is very difficult to date such items but our judgement puts these in the early to mid 20th century period.

The shield measurements are 17" high by 10" wide. Both antlers have been removed from the skull, drilled and threaded so they can be dismantled for shipping. They can then be placed back on, for display. This helps to keep postage costs down.

The Red Deer (Cervus elaphus), or Red Stag, is one of the largest deer species that inhabits most of Europe, the Caucasus Mountains region, Asia Minor, Iran, parts of western Asia, and central Asia. It also inhabits the Atlas Mountains region between Morocco and Tunisia in north-western Africa. The red deer is the largest non-domesticated mammal still existing in the Netherlands, United Kingdom and Ireland. The Barbary stag (which resembles the western European red deer) is the only member of the deer family represented in Africa. Only the stags have antlers, which are made of bone and grow at a rate of 2 ½ cm (1inch) a day. The antlers start growing in the spring and are shed each year, usually at the end of winter.
